INTRACOM IT SERVICES GROUP at the Free/Open Source Software 2010 Conference

Peania, July 26, 2010 – INTRACOM IT SERVICES Group, the leading provider of integrated IT services in Greece, participated in the Free / Open Source Software 2010 Conference, organized by the Greek Free / Open Source Software Society (GFOSS).

The conference, organized by GFOSS, a non-profit organization founded in 2008 by 25 Greek Universities, Research Centres, Higher Technological Education Institutes (ATEI) and the Greek Research and Technology Network (GRNET) aimed at disseminating knowledge and new developments regarding FOSS and attracting developers and fostering cooperation and equal participation in the promotion and development of FOSS in Greece. During the conference, presentations were made on FOSS projects in various sectors such as the Public Sector, Entrepreneurship, Education & Research, Cloud Computing, Open Standards and Interoperability Protocols, etc.

At its central presentation, INTRACOM IT SERVICES Group, through Mr. Nazaret Kazarian, Senior Software Engineer, presented the Spring Web Flow (SWF), one the basic products of the Spring portfolio that provides the infrastructure for building and running rich web applications. In addition, Mr. Kazarian, as a member of the Open Source community, elaborated on his contribution to the development of the framework through improvements and additions of new features. Concluding, he touched upon the utilization of SWF in large Public Sector projects that INTRACOM IT SERVICES Group implements and the significant benefits it brings to the productivity of developers, as well as the usability of the applications.

INTRACOM IT SERVICES Group, by participating in the FOSS community and through strategic partnerships with internationally known software manufacturers, validates the Group's commitment to innovation, utilizing the optimum technology for the benefit of its clients and partners.
